THE BATTLE LOST.

The Republicans Elect Their Whole City Ticket.

Dabney and Forbes Less Than 30 Votes Behind.

A Heavy Vote But a Quiet and Peaceable Election.

The election Saturday was the most exciting and hotly contested municipal fight ever waged in the city. The Republicans polled their strength early and were about 75 votes ahead at noon. Both sides worked untiringly till night and a tremendous vote was polled. The Republicans had a decided advantage in having the sheriff of the election shift his vote in many instances was cast to settle ties between the judges. The total vote was 1050 and the entire Republican ticket was elected by majorities of from 24 to 63 over the foremost man on the Progressive ticket. Following is the vote for the various candidates:

| Republican. | Progressive. |
|----------------------------|----------------------|
| O. S. Brown, 501 | F. W. Tabery, 420 |
| Alex. Gilliam, 471 | M. C. Forbes, 413 |
| E. P. Campbell, 470 | M. C. Forbes, 413 |
| A. H. Anderson, 447 | J. O. Thompson, 400 |
| C. G. McDaniel, 438 | W. J. Withers, 400 |
| E. B. Long, 430 | H. C. Gast, 400 |
| J. P. Proust, 444 | F. J. Henderson, 413 |
| Scattering, W. M. Hill, 21 | Peer Postell, 1 |

An analysis of the vote shows that more than 100 votes were cast for the Republican ticket that were not on the tax lists of the city. A few of these were exempted parties, some were young men just of age, but a large majority of them were men either not entitled to vote or floaters overlooked by the assessors. A list of their names was taken down for the benefit of the city, as the assessor has the right to list all parties who lodge the assessor. There were probably enough of these votes to have changed the result of two or three of the Progressive candidates if they had been ruled out, but the Republicans would probably have elected a majority of their board any way. Their majority in the city is from 125 to 150 on a full vote and they had all of their workers on hand and kept their forces well in line.

Probably 25 white Republicans and 35 or 40 colored men voted for the Progressive ticket, while 25 or 30 Democrats voted with the Republicans. There was a great deal of scratching in the afternoon, probably 75 split tickets being voted.

As was expected the hindmost man on the ticket elected is a candidate for a county officer, who appears to have been lulled by the friends of other candidates.

The struggle is over and the battle has been lost. The Kentuckian accepts defeat with as good a grace as possible and is ready to extend its congratulations to the victorious candidates.

City Attorney Jas. Breathitt was re-elected without opposition, receiving 537 votes.

A HUNG JURY.

Probability That One of the Cronin Jurors Has Been Fixed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—The jury in the Cronin case will pass another night in its room. It stands just where it was on the first ballot on Friday night, fifty hours since—11 to 1 in favor of convicting all the defendants. The recalcitrant juror, John Colver, who would not have a word to say to his associates yesterday, unbundled far enough to-day to discuss some portions of the evidence, but no ballot was taken. Judge McConnell came in from his residence at Lake View at 4 o'clock, and waited until 6, when receiving no word from the jury room he declared the court adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

English Spavin Liniment removes all Hard, Soft or Calloused Lumps and Blisters from horses, Blood Spavins, Curbs, Splints, Scurvy Ring-bones, Stiffs, Sprains, all swollen Throats, Coughs, Etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. Warranted the most wonderful Blemish Cure ever known. Sold by H. B. GARNER.

FAIRVIEW.

FAIRVIEW, Ky., Dec. 16.—Owen Clark, Jr., was arraigned before Judge D. Lacey on the 12th for evading toll and breach of the peace at the toll gate near here and the jury of 6 brought in a verdict of not guilty.

Col. F. B. Richardson, of Pembroke, was mixing with his many friends here Thursday.

Sheriff Cartwright, of Todd, was the guest of Esq. W. B. Brewer one day last week.

Miss Anna W. Hancock, of St. Bethlehem, Tenn., who has been visiting here for some time, returned home Friday, accompanied by her cousin, Mr. Jesse Hancock.

Much complaint is heard of meat being spoiled in this vicinity. This should be a warning to farmers not to be in too much haste to kill their pork.

Several of the boys were fined for shooting inside the corporate limits of Fairview.

Born to the wife of B. F. Wright a boy. It died and was buried the same day.

The elite of Fairview were entertained at the residence of M. R. Tandy on the night of the 13th. There was a musical entertainment that was highly enjoyed by all present.

Miss J. Anne Peden has returned from a visit to Barron county.

BENJAMIN BEE.

JAMES J. TANDY.

A TRIBUTE TO HIS MEMORY.

At the instance of his devoted mother, sorrowing in her fearful bereavement, would we write a few lines as a tribute to departed worth, dictated by a spirit of condoling sympathy, believing as we do that every praise-worthy element in human character should be entered upon personal record. Though we always feel more or less sad on account of the untimely death of one so noble in all that constitutes true manhood, and so promising in the hopeful outlook and reasonable possibilities of his future life, as was James J. Tandy, the subject of this sketch, for in his mental and moral make-up were developed an unflinching integrity which gave stability to his virtuous and unquestioned character. He possessed in a marked degree the commendable traits of a true gentleman that rose above the vacillating weaknesses of a vicious life, choosing as his associates and friends young men of probity and correct habits. On his word of honor, one could safely depend, and it sweetened the cup of bitterness to know of his high aims and fixed purpose, in the struggle of life.

He earned the respect and unquestioned confidence of all with whom he had to do. He was vigilant in business, faithful to duty, ever on the alert and prompt in action in every department of his operations, often eventful and perilous, watchful and ready wherever and whenever duty called him. He was sober in his habits, courteous in his demeanor and polite in address to every one, which won the confidence of all his associates and the well-merited esteem of all the railroad officials, as well as the social regards of the refined and intelligent. He was rapidly rising in the line of promotion as one in whom important trusts could be safely confided, knowing well that his willing hands and brave heart and dauntless courage fitted him for any sphere of railroad activity that might open up before him. His habits were exemplary and worthy of imitation. A clear-headed soberness was one of his prominent virtues. Fearless in peril and brave in danger, he faltered not when duty called him to do and dare in heat or cold, by night or day. In his kindness of heart, his generous nature often prompted him to relieve a friend from duty, even at the cost of an extra tax upon his own energies and power of endurance.

After the awful misfortune of losing his leg, by amputation, and all hope of recovery had failed and he saw his life-blood fast dripping away he called for pen and paper that he might write all of his effects to his eldest heart-broken mother, who then seemed dearer to him than ever before, and all the happy memories of his childhood and early life crowded in upon him, which cheered him in that dark, desponding hour, but he determined to meet death calmly and fearlessly, feeling that if his time had come, and that he must thus pass away, that he was willing to go. He had that moral courage that is inspired by honest convictions and as he ever dared to do right, he had a conscience void of offense toward God and man. His faults were few, but in his dying hour they were overshadowed by his many virtues. Bravely did he look the last enemy in the face and while conscious that his end was near, no murmur escaped his lips, even while passing through the dread portals of amputation without the numbing influence of a nerve quelling anesthetic. No remorseful terrors, that oft becloud the evening sky of the vile and the depraved, hung a single shadow across the sunset of his young life, believing as he did that it would be "better further on." So his bark was fearlessly launched out upon the wide ocean of eternity. Our sensibilities were more deeply touched on learning of his betrothal to a young lady of Tennessee, who would soon have been his bride. Though we but faintly imagine the poignant grief of his young confiding heart, as he learned of his sad and sudden taking off, as the news rolled back in wild and sickening surges upon her disappointed soul. A letter to him from her gentle hand, doubtless full of love and tenderness, but too sacred for mortal eyes to read, was placed, unopened, in his cold and nerveless grasp, to be read only by his disembodied spirit and the good angels that doubtless conveyed his soul to the land of the undying! In the hearts of loved ones left behind, throbs a hope that is immortal, while faith, on snowy pinions, spans the valley of human sorrow and climbs the glowing stairway of the skies, while a ray of light flashes back upon his tomb to relieve the sorrows of emotional bereavement, inspiring the thought that he now lives with the good, the true, and noble hearted.

When tears of bereavement shall fall on his grave,

As loved ones there gather to weep,

To have him come back they will never cease to pray,

To again cross that billowy deep.

For grief as availing makes darker the gloom,

When the heart pants for a loved one's light,

One thought brings a comfort and light up to the tomb,

And that thought is, "HE DIED AT HIS POST."

Hopkinsville, Ky., Dec. 8, 1889.

Mr. William T. Price, a Justice of the Peace, at Richmond, Nebraska, was confined to his bed last winter with a severe attack of lumbago; but a thorough application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm enabled him to get up and go to work. Mr. Price says: "The Balm cannot be recommended too highly." Let any one troubled with lumbago, neuralgia or lame back give it a trial and they will be of the same opinion. 50 cent bottles for sale by Buckner Leavelle.

A DENIAL.

"The members of Pardee Lodge, No. 43, are very much wrought up over the publication in the KENTUCKIAN that they are drilling for political purposes, and we, as members, take this method of contradicting the report, which is false and only published for political effect. We are a peaceable people and want no trouble, and will have none unless forced upon us."

A. Jones, Grand Master.
Charles Jackson, Secretary.
Warren Billinger, Robert Lunde.
William Hooper, John Cook.
Ben Hunt, Lydia Jackson.
Mary Smith, Louis Broady.
Katie Billinger, George Ann Wooldrige.

The above circular was issued Friday in reply to the statement that a company was being drilled with guns in the hall where political meetings were being held. The company alluded to was not composed in any part of women and we are not adverse that any women even be present. If an injustice has been done to a benevolent organization, it was unintentional and arose from the fact that their hall was being used for political meetings. The statement in the above circular that the KENTUCKIAN had charged the Pardee Lodge with drilling for political purposes or for any purpose, is entirely without foundation on fact.

SOMEWHAT INDEFINITE.

How a Colored Man Enlightened a Trust-ster in Search of Information.

Mr. Frederick Log Olmsted was traveling through Virginia and lost his way. Coming to a log cabin he drove up to make inquiries. A negro shortly made his appearance—it was in the days of slavery—wearing a battered hat, a red cravat and an old dress-coat, ragged and threadbare, but adorned with new brass buttons.

He knew Mr. Thomas W., certainly he did, and he reckoned I had come about four miles out of my way. But no matter, he could show me a straight road—a short cut.

"How far is it from here?"
"Oh, 'tain't far, sar?"
"How far do you think?"
"Well, massa, I spose—I spose—look ing at my horse—I spose, massa, if you goes de way, sar, dat I shows you, sar, I reckon it'll take you—"

"How far is it—how many miles?"
"How many miles, sar? Hal massa, I don't reckon I reckon I ken tell you—not 'clessy, sar, how many miles it is, not 'clessy, 'clessy, sar."

"How is that—you don't what?"
"I don't reckon I reckon I ken give you de direction ezactly about de miles, sar."

"Oh, but how many miles do you think it is? Is it two miles?"
"Yes, sar, as de road is now, I think it is just about two miles. Day's long ones, dough, I reckon."

"Long ones? Then it's more than two miles?"
"Yes, sar, I reckon it's four or five miles."

"Four or five? Four or five long ones or short ones, do you mean?"
"I don't reckon I know, sar, wedder they is short ones or long ones, sar, but I reckon you'll find 'em middlin' long; I spose you'll be about two hours 'foe you be done gone all de way to Massa W.'s."

Mr. Olmsted followed the indefinite darts of the directions, and naturally enough, soon found himself bewildered worse than before—Youth's Companion.
